NATIONALITY	British
LANGUAGES	English (mother tongue) Kiswahili (speaking ability and reading comprehension) Dutch (reading comprehension)

EXPERTISE

Deborah Bryceson has extensive experience as a development consultant, researcher and project manager. Trained as an economic geographer and sociologist, her work has spanned a wide range of development issues within Africa and beyond. Her current work focuses on the interaction between social and economic dynamics in rural and urban settings from a political economy perspective.

- Areas of expertise include:
 - International migration patterns in association with transnational families
 - Artisanal mining patterns, careers and lifestyles in East Africa and comparatively over space and time
 - Livelihood, mobility and settlement in processes of economic transition – the study of poverty, deagrarianisation, occupational change, urbanisation in developing countries, urban economies, urban growth, rural and urban transport and mobility patterns of the poor, and rural-urban linkages
 - Agrarian development – rural social and economic development, notably: food marketing, agricultural policy, famine prevention and rehabilitation, urban food supply constraints, rural transport and the impact of public investment on rural welfare
 - Impact of AIDS – the spread of AIDS in rural areas, social and economic dimensions; and
 - Gender – women’s employment patterns in rural and urban areas
- Field experience in: Tanzania, Uganda, Malawi, Zimbabwe, South Africa, Ethiopia, Sudan and Nigeria as well as desk experience of many other African and Asian countries
- Synthesis of transnational and trans-continental development literature on a wide variety of topics as evidenced by a strong publication record and ability to work with large teams of multi-disciplinary consultants, researchers and authors
- Impact and evaluation studies of development processes, policies and programmes for governments and multi-lateral agencies (including the UK government’s DFID, other European governments, the World Bank, UN agencies and various international NGOs)
